Shiatsu (30 / 60 minutes)

Shiatsu is a form of bodywork therapy. It works on meridians and pressure points to relieve tension and pain, to free any blockage to the Chi flow and restore energy to areas where it is low - just like acupuncture, but without the use of needles. Shiatsu literally means 'finger pressure'; however, a practitioner will use their knuckles, elbows, forearms or knees and sometimes feet during a treatment. These techniques encourage self-healing, rebalancing of the body, and the easing of both mental and physical tension.
